H-2 Star City Bottling Co. Miamisburg Ohio

Two different H-2 Over-The-Top openers advertising Star City Bottling Co. of Miamisburg, OH. I have not seen other examples of Star City openers but for a small bottling company they made two different runs of the H-2 opener. Anyone else own a Star City opener?

— 2019 JFO Convention #41 April 24-28, 2019 Doubletree Suites Dayton-Miamisburg OH —

The Miamisburg, OH convention is six weeks off and we have 18 attendees at this point. Don't miss out on the openers, corkscrews and fun times at JFO. The local beer collectors will be stopping so if you have any general beer advertising items you want to sell please bring them along. The best news I got this past month was the original sales person I had worked with, who got another job last year, is back. Just really awesome to work with. Pat has written her column on things to do in the Dayton/Miamisburg area. Anyone wanting to come at the last minute contact me. There are several nearby hotels but the Doubletree should have rooms available. As Ollie Hibbeler always said, "BE THERE!"

— 2020 JFO Convention #42 April ??? 2020 Quakertown PA —

Just a short note to say I have made preliminary plans for next year's convention to be at the Hampton Inn in Quakertown, Pa. I am still negotiating a contract but hope to have the details worked out by June.

Member's Update

Lance Aldridge, who just joined JFO in 2017, passed away Nov 11, 2018 in his sleep. I only met him for one day at last year's Seattle convention. A really nice guy from Floresville, Tx. Lance told me he had bought some of Jeb Burruss' Texas openers and he really liked buying the "good stuff" (Tommy Campnell and I helped him do that in Seattle). Our condolences to his wife Marrie and the Aldredge family.

Lance at a local beer show and Lance buying openers from Jeb Burruss at another Texas beer show. RIP Lance.

25 Years As Your Editor

The end of 2018 saw me finish 25 years as your JFO Editor. I am not going anywhere and hope to do another 25. Thank you to everyone who has supported JFO since 1979 and myself since 1994. John

JFO Conv Be THERE!

Spouse's Corner

By Pat Stanley, the Editor's Spouse

JFO is next month!! We should change the name from JFO Convention to JFO Reunion as it is that indeed, a time to catch up with friends who are like family and to welcome new members into this close group.

John wanted me to write about the dogs, our two Yorkies, Jazzy and Snazzy, littermates who passed on two sad Thursdays in January, one week apart at the young age of 12.5 years. And so, I am, but not exactly how he may have intended. We knew that we were losing Snazzy to cancer, but Jazzy did not have any known life-threatening issues, so we were totally unprepared when she had a stroke and had to be put down. Some think that grief was a factor in the second loss as Jazzy and Snazzy had been together their entire life. When we lose a JFO member, we grieve for all the time we've had together united by a common love of collecting. Dog is Man's Best Friend, but JFO Friends run a very close second. Right to the end, as frail as Snazzy was, she made the long, slow journey to where she could use the bathroom. We have all witnessed members who are facing physical challenges but still show up at JFO, because missing it isn't an option they choose. (John is one of these, coming to St. Louis in 2008 against his doctor's wishes after serious surgery that changed his life. It was the best medicine for him.)

Spending time and going places with my JFO Family will be the best medicine for me as I still live in a world of disbelief that I am without Yorkies after 5 Yorkies over 40 Years.

Two of my nieces may join us too. One would be coming from Kentucky and the other from Virginia. It would be great for them to find out what this annual event is all about and the people who make it so special. Some of you met my Texas niece and her family when JFO was in San Antonio in 2010.

Let's look at some places we might go!

Miamisburg is known as the "Star City". For information on how that name "may" have been attached to this city of 20,000 plus people, go to <http://miamisburg200.com/history/>.

In September Ernie Thoms was in Miamisburg for Jeanette's high school reunion and sent a list of places we may want to visit while there in April. He sent ones that may not already be on our list, so that explains why something like the Wright Brothers Museum was not on his list. I decided to expand on his list, so those he suggested have a  by them.

Thanks Ernie!

The Dayton Mall with lots of shopping and restaurants is .6 miles on foot (11 minutes) from our hotel or 1.0 mile by car (6 minutes). 2700 Miamisburg-Centerville Road, Dayton.

 Marion's Piazza – popular pizza place behind the Dayton Mall. 8991 Kingridge Drive, Dayton.

 Esther Price Candy Store – two locations – one ten minutes from Dayton Mall at 269 N. Main St., Centerville, OH and the other at 1709 Wayne Avenue, Dayton adjacent to the Woodland Cemetery highlighted in this list. The same recipes are still used that Esther Price herself perfected in 1926. It all started when Esther learned to make fudge in her 7th grade Home Economics class. You can download a catalog to start picking favorites.

 Cox Arboretum Metro Park about 10 minutes from Dayton Mall. Here you will find a quiet, scenic park, easy walking nature trails, tower to climb and lots of trees and plants and is free of charge. 6733 N Springboro Pike, Dayton.

The park is 189 acres. It includes a shrub garden with over 500 varieties of trees and shrubs, butterfly house (I must go there), herb garden, ornamental grass collection, perennial garden, rock garden, water garden, and woodland wildflower garden.

 Woodland Cemetery and Arboretum 118 Woodland Ave. Dayton, Ohio. Adjacent to the University of Dayton campus. About 25 minutes from the Dayton Mall. Historic architecture wooded hilly area. Lookout Terrace has a view overlooking the City of Dayton. Many famous people buried there from the Wright Brothers to Owen Stanley, King of the gypsy tribes in England. (oh my, could John be related?) See related article on the cemetery's website.

After the above contribution from Ernie, I visited their website at www.woodlandcemetery.org. The grounds of this cemetery founded in 1841 are beautiful. Other famous people with gravesites in Woodland include Erma Bombeck, John H. Patterson (NCR), George P. Huffman (Huffy Bicycles) and George Mead (Mead Paper). I used the Search Records option to search for the Stanleys and it listed 50 of 64 Stanleys. Didn't find any records under my maiden name, Jolicoeur.

 Carillon Historic Park 1000 Carillon Blvd, Dayton 45409, about 25 minutes from the Dayton Mall. I checked out their website and this park is definitely a Historical Park. There is a café and brewery on site and a gift shop that features some beautiful glassware on their website.

 Ernie also listed Centerville Carry Out at 34 West Franklin St, Centerville, Ohio that has a large selection of beer and wine. And for the Antique Mall enthusiasts, he listed Heart of Ohio Antique Center in Springfield, Oh 4785 E. National Road, I-70 Exit 62; two Springfield Antique Malls at I-70 Exit 59 and if that isn't enough, three large antique malls in the area about 45 minutes from Dayton Mall via I-675.

OH.... interested in Brew Pubs? I will be picking up some brochures for the Ale Trail, something recently published due to the growth of interest in these establishments.

What is often associated with Dayton? The Wright Brothers!! When I started searching for the Wright Brothers Museum, I had to reach out for help because there are a lot of locations in the area related to Aviation. Without mentioning that I was calling from North Carolina where we claim fame for their first flight at Kitty Hawk, I found someone who could help me.

The best website to figure out where to go is www.aviationtrailinc.org and select Trail Sites. There are three sites all within the Dayton Aviation Heritage National Historic Park run by the National Park Service. They are (1) Wright-Dunbar Interpretive Center & Aviation Trail Visitor Center (2) Aviation Trail Parachute Museum (3) The Wright Cycle Company. You may wonder why the one Center is named Wright-Dunbar. When the Wright Brothers had a printing business, one of their printing clients was Paul Lawrence Dunbar, a former classmate of Wilbur Wright, and later on an internationally known black poet. The name of the center reflects this special relationship and the exhibits tell about the lives of the three men and the West Side Neighborhood in which the center is located.

The Wright Cycle Shop tells their story before their flight as it was the birthplace of their aviation future and where they first started thinking about powered flight.

The Huffman Prairie Flying Field listed on the above website, tells the story after Kitty Hawk, NC. This is where the Wright Brothers flew their experimental airplanes over Torrence Huffman's pastures.

Interested in The National Museum of the US Air Force and/or National Aviation Hall of Fame? All the information you need is also on the www.aviationtrailinc.org website.

Curious about other things you might like to see in the area? Search the web before you head to JFO. Are you a quilter? Your search would bring up "The Little Shop of Stitches" located at 79 S. Main Street in Miamisburg.

Don't tell John, but I searched for shoes! I found a store named Roderer at 5500 North Main Street in Dayton. The website detailed the history of the family that started this business. Definitely a store I would like to visit.

With that I should bring this column to a close.

Look forward to seeing everyone and exploring the area, making more happy memories shared with JFO Friends.

Fall Shows I Attended

CCCC Convention Portland ME September 23-25

My first Canadian Corkscrew Collectors Club meeting and I had a great time. Fall is the best time of year to be in Portland, ME. The convention was hosted by Josef and Sue L'Africain along with Tommy Campnell. Their membership turns out in numbers (over 40) and the corkscrew buy-sell-trade was fast and furious. The meeting starts Sunday night and finishes at lunchtime on Tuesday. They have two buy-sell-trade sessions besides some room-to-room dealing. An auction also takes place and from low-end to high-end lots of corkscrews to be had. I stayed over two days as Josef had an open house in Vinalhaven, ME on Wednesday after the meeting. A fabulous collection of mainly U. S. Patents. The club alternates meetings with one year in North America and the next year in Europe. Thank you Josef, Sue and Tommy for a great time.

Eastern Great Lakes Breweriana Collectibles Show Richfield OH October 11-13

This was a brand new fall beer show and was very well attended. As with most beer shows the last few years there were a lot of cans and some miscellaneous items (smalls). I was really attending for the fall NABA Board Meeting and it is always good seeing fellow collectors. Opener activity was limited.

Watsonville Beer Show Watsonville CA November 3

A really nice one day beer show and for me a day to hang out with Pete Nowicki and visit with John Cartwright and Brian Cooley. I bought a few items and John and Brian had picked up a big selection of new micro openers. Pete drove us down from San Francisco and after the show we antique our way back. A few miscellaneous items bought at a couple of antique malls but as with most in today's world, you do not see many openers and the ones that are found are the very common ones. The bad news is after many years this was the last Watsonville show. Hopefully someone will pick up the torch somewhere next year.

Belleville Breweriana Show Belleville IL November 10

Pat was so happy I needed to visit Art Santen's house one more time to buy more openers so I worked it in the weekend of the Belleville Show. I did score a couple of nice Tennessee openers at the show (they came from the bottle dealer half of the show) and sold a few openers to Norm Jay and Dave Lendy. Jim Osborn came and we had a good visit. Art let me spend an afternoon going through his openers and I spent close to $600. The show has a lot of St. Louis area breweriana and is always well attended.

Red Fox Fallfest Auburn MA November 15-18

The Gary Deachman annual get together is at the Fallfest Show. We always do a little dealing and this time Gary got some New Hampshire openers and I got some of A-20 Spinners from Gary's selling stock. I found one good opener at the show, a L-1 Pepsi-Cola drop down can opener which was quickly resold to Tommy Campnell. After the show I spent a night at Gary's place in North Woodstock. We attempted a big trade but could not agree so maybe next year. Like several shows now just room-to-room trading but always a fun time in Auburn, Mass.

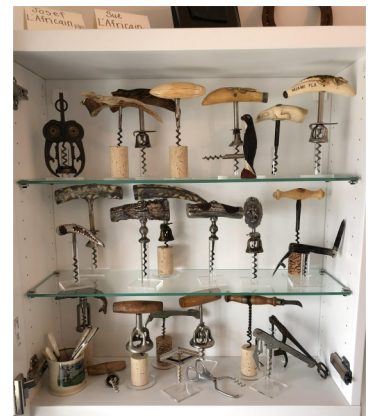

Macungie Beer Show Macungie PA Dec 1

My annual visit to see Ben and Cornelia Hoffman includes a local beer show and Macungie is a really good one day show. Ben and I had a couple of tables and sold well. Nothing high end and my best customer was Keith Brown who I had stopped to visit a couple of days before. Always good seeing Kathy and Keith. Ben and I also visited Boots Queen in Jim Thorpe, Pa. Everyone was doing well. The Macungie show has a good walk-in crowd and is held twice a year. After this one Pat said I had been to 8 shows in 2018. A good year opener and breweriana hobby.

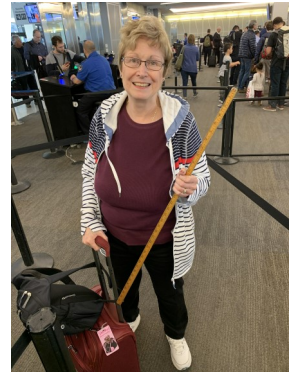

Fall Show Pictures (1)

Ten display case pictures of Josef L'Africain's awesome American Corkscrew Patent Collection. Josef and Sue's wine store on Vinalhaven Island. Below Tommy, Josef, Sue and myself at their open house. I survived the 75 minute ferry ride each way. Not something my stomach would want to do daily. Thanks again you three for an awesome time. Yes Sue ran the meeting. Bottom left is a nice corkscrew I sold that now resides in Arkansas. The 1938 "Hootch-Owl" patent.

John & Pat at her cousin's house in Tiburon. Starr X couple Marcia & John Eblen. Pete Nowicki, John Cartwright & Brian Cooley at Watsonville. Pat carrying my Stanley yardstick purchase through airport security. The big 3 at Belleville: Art Santen, Jim Osborn & Norm Jay. Gary receiving dialysis. My table at Macungie. L-1 Pepsi. Lovebirds Ben & Cornelia Hoffman. Keith Brown, Ben and Marlene (Ben's daughter). Ben, Marlene and her partner, Gary.

I had to chuckle as Art Santen thought this G-9 opener said Fred Sehring so he used a laminated tag since it was so worn (actually a G-9 Schmidt City Club). I have to give Art an A for effort but F on results.

Note: no G-9 Fred Sehring actually exists in any collection. One less for John Bitterman to chase after.

Vaughan Novelty MFG Co. Made Fox Deluxe Beer Openers by Andrew ClaymanA History of The Crown, Throat & Opener Co, Vaughan Manufacturing & Harry L. Vaughan

The beer bottle and the bottle opener—a vital symbiotic relationship that’s been mildly inconveniencing mankind for generations. No one ever knows exactly where their bottle opener is at any given moment, nor where it came from in the first place. It used to be on your keychain, probably, but then you let someone borrow it at a party once, and now, who knows?

Most openers are distinguishable only by the faded name of the company on its label—perhaps Coca Cola, or Budweiser, or maybe an old defunct brand of yesteryear, like Fox DeLuxe—“the Great Chicago Beer.” What most of us fail to notice, however, is the manufacturer ID that’s also cut into millions of these metal doohickeys. If it’s a slightly older model, there’s a good chance it says VAUGHAN—a name that removed more caps in the 20th century than every playing of the National Anthem combined.

Even during the 1930s, when most manufacturers were wallowing in the economic sinkhole of the Depression, Chicago’s Vaughan Novelty MFG Company was enjoying a significant upswing, cranking out truckloads of pocket-sized paraphernalia each day. There were three key factors on their side—(1) Prohibition was ending, (2) Americans were starting to drink out of steel (author had aluminum) cans, and (3) pull tabs didn’t exist yet.

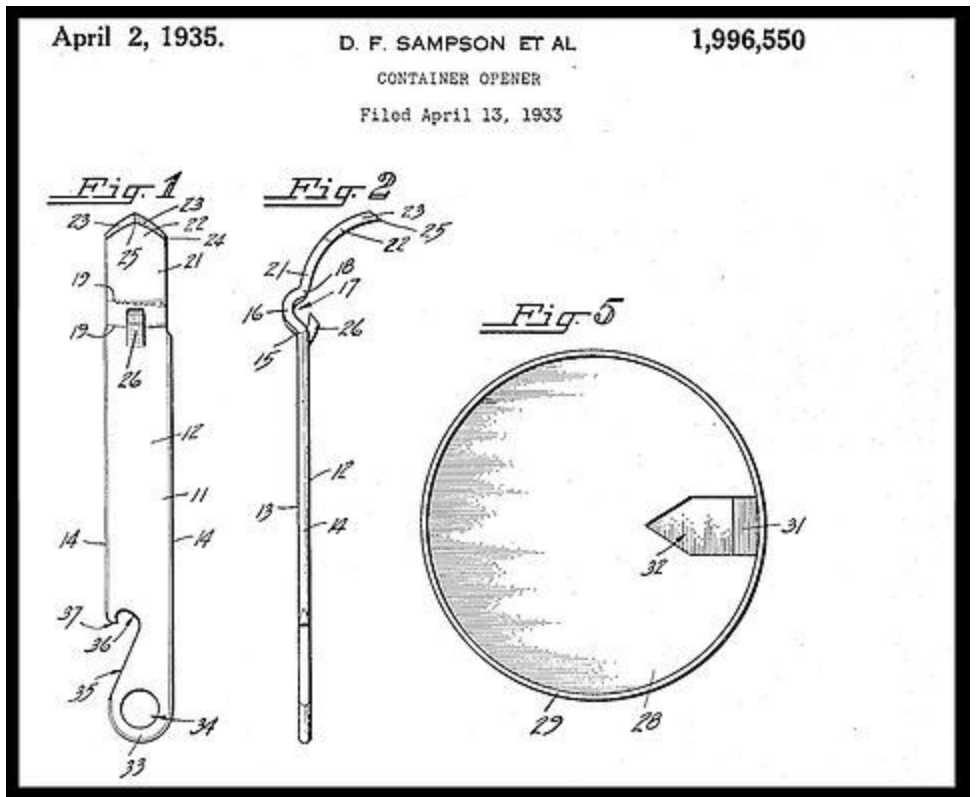

The new novelty of canned beer, in particular, was a game changer. It had come about largely to help post-Prohibition breweries like the Peter Fox Brewing Co. (makers of Fox DeLuxe) save on production and shipping costs. Consumers, as an added benefit, got to avoid paying the extra deposit required with glass bottles. This win-win innovation didn’t arrive fully realized, however.

For one thing, beers and sodas poured from a tin can maintained a distinct, generally unpleasant metallic taste. Secondly, the flat, airtight, factory-sealed tops of the cans made them frustratingly undrinkable without the appropriate, compatible device to pop them open. Using a knife was a dangerous undertaking, and older styles of can openers didn't always fit the bill for this modern drinker's conundrum.

The one proven solution was a new variation on the classic "church key" style of opener, developed by American Can Company employees Dewitt Sampson & John Hothersall in 1933—specifically to address the arrival of the drinking can. Their design (U.S. patent 1,996,550) was described as a "punch opener for producing a substantial pouring opening in containers having projecting end seams or joints." Since the item was a bit outside American Can Co's usual wheelhouse, they outsourced production to the company already known as "the world's largest manufacturer of can openers"—the Vaughan Novelty MFG Co., of course.

The familiar church key openers that Vaughan produced in Chicago—like the ones in our collection advertising Fox DeLuxe—were made across several decades, and often have the original 1,996,550 patent number listed on them. Most are dual-purpose in design, as well, with a rounded bottle-opening end and a pointed can-opening end.

From kitchens to bar rooms to ballparks, just about everyone was either using a Vaughan appliance or sitting next to someone who was. And yet, from the 1910s to the 1990s, the company somehow remained largely anonymous despite its own ubiquity.

Opening Up the Can

The whole thing begins with Harry L. Vaughan—born in Versailles, Kentucky, in 1871. His father, the respected Louisville physician Dr. Robert Vaughan, was a decorated Civil War veteran—a lieutenant colonel in the Union army who’d been wounded at both Fort Donelson and Shiloh. Young Harry was the baby of the family, and grew up admiring his four older brothers, as well as his pops.

Harry’s education is hard to pin down, but it appears that he followed his brother Millard into a career in sales, rather than taking up his dad’s path in medicine. One of Harry’s early jobs was with Louisville’s Weissinger Tobacco Company in the mid 1890s, which may have given him his unexpected entry into the field of tin cans and can openers, as well as other accessories such as tobacco cutters and kettle scrapers. By 1898, he had relocated to New York City as a sales agent, and soon caught on with the Liquid Carbonic Company—an industry leader in soda fountains.

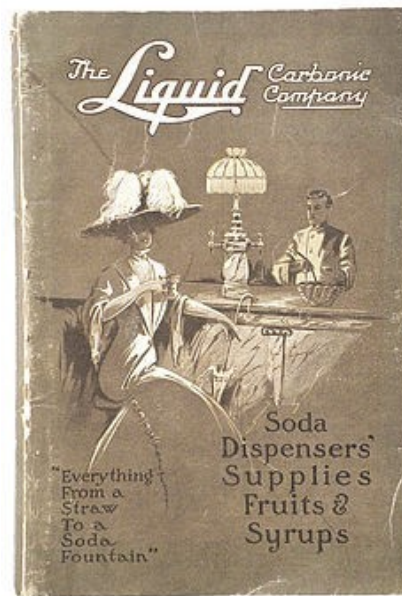

Now, with an established background in canning, bottling, and beverages, a 34 year-old Harry Vaughan took the next logical step in 1905, joining Baltimore’s massively successful Crown Cork and Seal Company as their western sales rep in Chicago. Crown Cork, still in business today as Crown Holdings, was the firm that had introduced the modern, disposable tin bottle cap (aka the “crown cork”) in 1892. That cap design has remained the gold standard for the subsequent 125 years, so it’s not surprising that Crown Cork was one of the fastest growing companies of its time, with manufacturing and distribution outposts around the world. This also made it no small responsibility for Vaughan to be the young face of that franchise in the Chicagoland market.

Harry Vaughan in his later years

Over the next few years, Harry not only refined his skills as a salesman, but also learned the nuts and bolts of designing and manufacturing the twisty, turny, metallic arsenal of an evolving industry. This included paying close attention to the feedback of customers, particularly the growing complaints about bottles getting chipped when crown corks were pulled off with standard bottle openers.

In 1909, with a network of Midwestern connections firmly established, Harry Vaughan became something of an in-demand free agent of the bottle cap business. In January, he left Crown Cork and signed with the New York Specialty Company, makers of "Security" brand bottle stoppers.

"Mr. Vaughan will have headquarters in Chicago and will visit the middle west in the interest of his house," the American Brewers' Review reported. "His extensive acquaintance in the brewing trade ought to be a guarantee of his success."

Harry was certainly successful, but not necessarily loyal. Just six months later, in the summer of '09, he cut bait with his new employer and bunked up with yet another corporate mistress.

"Henry L. Vaughan, formerly traveling representative of the New York Specialty Co., is now Western representative of the United Cork & Seal Co. of Millis, Mass.," Brewers Journal reported, "and will maintain headquarters at Chicago. Mr. Vaughan is well known to the trade and we wish him abundant success in his new position."

Well known, indeed. But again, not one to be tied down. Within a few months, Vaughan ended his tenure with United Cork, as well. Apparently nobody thought to make the guy sign a non-compete clause!

It's not clear if Harry was playing a game with all these companies, absorbing their secrets then jumping to the next one, or if his naked ambition was simply wearing out his welcome with employers. Whatever the issue, Vaughan finally decided there'd be no point in seeking any more suitors for his services. He was ready to set out on his own.

The Crown Throat and Opener Company

You gotta appreciate the balls it took for Vaughan to not only start his own company, but to call it the "Crown Throat and Opener Co."—a blatant attempt to piggyback off the trusted name of his former employer, Crown Cork & Seal. He would surprisingly keep this name for several years before doing the inevitable re-brand.

In the meantime, early ads for the Crown Throat & Opener Company wasted no time promoting its first flagship product, Harry Vaughan's own "Never Chip"—hailed as "the best stationary crown bottle opener made."

Vaughan Novelty MFG Co. Made Fox Deluxe Beer Openers by Andrew Clayman

A 1910 edition of American Bottler magazine detailed Vaughan's triumphant entry into the big leagues.

"To overcome the long-continued complaints of the bottling trade, the Crown Throat and Opener Company, of Chicago, Ill., after months of experimenting, have at last perfected an opener, which they have appropriately named 'Never-Chip.' It is a very simple device, easily and quickly attached to the bar, the ice-box, or any other convenient place. It has been thoroughly tested by all the large breweries, and found an absolute preventative of chipped bottles."

As the company name suggested, Vaughan was also making "crown throats" and drop plungers intended to help standardize the bottle-sealing process, as well. Tighter closure, easier removal.

"Mr. Harry L. Vaughan, inventor of these devices . . . is naturally familiar with every detail of the requirements of their manufacture."

The original Crown Throat factory was located at 136 W. Lake Street, and by 1911, local sales agents were being recruited via ads in the Tribune's classifieds.

Crown Throat's national advertising campaigns touted its products as "One Good Thing After Another," and called the Never-Chip "The Bottler's Bottle Insurance." Harry Vaughan's name was also increasingly emphasized as a brand unto itself. "VAUGHAN's Opener," one ad read, "is a boon to the bottling trade; and indispensable for use on machine-made, or, in fact, all perfectly finished Crown bottles."

Along with the wall-mounted Never-Chip, Vaughan was also producing quite modern looking, pocket-sized bottle openers like the nicked "Nicklo", the copper finished "Kant-Slip," and the key-ring friendly "Prest-O-Lite."

Production slowed during World War I, but Vaughan pushed forward, moving to a larger space at 701 W. Fulton Street. By 1915, the Crown Throat name had finally been scrapped, and—in a wise effort to leave the door open to more types of tools and gadgets—the Vaughan Novelty MFG Co. was born.

The Great American Novelty

The onset of the 1920s saw Vaughan Novelty relocate to what would be its primary home of the next 40+ years—a one-story, 100 x 100 ft. factory at 3211 W. Carroll Avenue in Garfield Park, built for just $25,000. This wasn't exactly a sprawling operation, but when most of your goods fit in a person's pocket, a lot of stock can move from a pretty small room.

One newspaper report at the time now identified Vaughan as a “manufacturer of advertising specialties,” and that marks an important evolution in the overall business plan.

Vaughan did run some straight-to-consumer advertising, and they sold self-branded “VAUGHAN” gear direct to hardware stores and pharmacies. More of their revenue, however, was coming from arranged deals with other companies, in which Vaughan—acting like a pseudo advertising agency—customized its products with its clients names emblazoned on the metal.

Since many can and bottle producers were essentially dependent on their consumers having one of these Vaughan tools at their disposal anyway, the relationship was almost too practical to pass up. Canada Dry, for example, could order a giant stock of Canada Dry bottle openers from Vaughan, then package those openers as “giveaways” with a six-pack of their ginger ale.

“Now is the time,” a 1922 Vaughan ad claimed, “for the soda water bottler to make his name and his brands known. Advertise with Bottle Openers.”

Targeting the “soda water bottler” was, of course, a consequence of Prohibition. With alcohol now illegal, and no way to sell accessories to breweries and barmen above ground, Vaughan had to expand into new markets, including soda, dairy, and baked goods. The company started making more milk bottle carriers and cap lifters, mini spatulas for making pies, orange peelers, cork screws, ice picks, lemon squeezers, can openers, corn forks, and something called a Perfo-Siphon—“the perfect mixer for blending fruit juices.” A patented cap lifter / corkscrew combo called the “Nifty” was another consistent hot seller.

Supposedly, even some of the prizes in Cracker Jack boxes originated from the Vaughan factory. It was, as the name would suggest, a true novelty company.

Through it all, Harry Vaughan was always very hands-on in every aspect of his business, from collecting patents on new designs to training the sales team and expanding the clientele both within the trade and out in the general public. He kept up these efforts despite a series of personal losses, highlighted by the deaths of three of his brothers—William, Millard, and Dudley—all in a four year span between 1919 and 1923. To cope, Harry seemed to embrace the bottling industry as his alternate family, and as a nice bonus, they were making him a wealthy man of the roaring ‘20s.

“The ever growing business coming to me from all sections of the world,” Vaughan wrote in the intro to his 1927 catalog, “serves to increase the feelings of responsibility I have always felt towards my friends among the Bottlers. Their loyalty incurs upon me the duty not only of maintaining the quality and service that brings me their yearly specifications, but of constantly improving, by every possible means, the machinery of factory and office by which I serve these valued friends.”

Beer’s Back!

The Vaughan Novelty MFG Co. hadn’t exactly struggled during Prohibition, but they certainly were chomping at the bit when the 18th amendment was repealed in 1933. Shortly thereafter, a series of new steel-wire bottle cap removers were introduced for the traditional crown-style beer bottle, and, by 1935, the Vaughan “Quick & Easy” can opener became the No. 1 way to crack open a brand new canned brew.

Vaughan Novelty MFG Co. Made Fox Deluxe Beer Openers by Andrew Clayman

Around the same time, an opportunistic businessman named Peter Fox purchased the former Hoffman Bros. brewery in Chicago at 2626 W. Monroe Street, eager to bring it back to its former glory. Embracing the canned beer trend, the Peter Fox Brewing Co. built up a regional following over the next few years, enabling Fox to buy out additional breweries in Marion, Indiana, and Grand Rapids, Michigan, in the 1940s. Naturally, he also signed a deal with Vaughan Novelty to produce exclusive Fox DeLuxe openers.

We can pretty easily surmise that our particular museum artifacts were made in the late 1940s or early '50s. Metal rationing had made both beer cans and can openers relatively obsolete during the war years, and the Peter Fox Brewing Company went out of business by 1955, so we're left with a fairly small window for these things to have been commissioned. We can also verify that Fox was using its "Great Chicago Beer" slogan during the same era, bringing the timeline together.

[Incidentally, the Fox DeLuxe brand didn't completely die with its parent company. It remained in circulation under new, non-Chicago ownership through the 1960s, and was recently revived again in 2017 by the Creston Brewery in Grand Rapids, although the new version doesn't appear to have any connection to the original recipe.]

Again, it's worth emphasizing that all production of Vaughan's usual line of products was brought to a screeching halt during World War II. For a solid four years, from 1942 through 1945, the Carroll Avenue plant was an appendage of the U.S. government, making bomb fuses for the army and navy. It was a profitable enterprise, but it also left the company a bit rusty and unprepared when the war ended, and peacetime can opener demands started cascading in.

“Canned beer is back,” the Decatur Herald reported on July 15, 1947, “but its return has accentuated another postwar shortage—the beer can opener.

“Vaughan Novelty Manufacturing Co., which claims to be the world’s largest manufacturer of can openers, said today a pressing demand has forced it to expand facilities and that it soon would be producing 100 million beer can openers a year.”

The Post-War Era

Sadly, Harry Vaughan never got to see his business return to its usual peacetime affairs. He died of pneumonia in 1945 at the age of 74.

Though he was still the president and treasurer of Vaughan Novelty at the time, he had long since moved into a life of pseudo-retirement, marrying his wife Dora late in life and spending much of the ‘30s and ‘40s jetting back and forth from high society events in their adopted second home of Miami. Back in Chicago, the pair were living in a swank apartment in the Edgewater Beach Hotel, with Harry leaving much of his company in the hands of his longtime second-in-command, John M. Grace.

In June of 1948, with Grace now serving as president, a small Garfield Park newspaper, the Garfieldian, published a story on the local business done good.

“Cruising right through the years when solid housewives frowned on the flip young bride with a busy can opener,” the paper reported [weirdly], “the Vaughan company grew to become the world's largest producer of can and bottle openers.

“. . . Still operating on its original [not actually original] site at 3211 Carroll, the factory, officially Vaughan Novelty Manufacturing Co., employs 125 persons whose main work is the production and packing of the openers.

“. . . Manufacture of the openers is mostly a punch press operation. One of the liquid can openers is turned out complete by a punch press at the rate of 100 per minute. After punching the openers, or parts in some cases, they are rolled for many hours in drums filled with metal pellets or sand. This rolling action knocks off all sharp edges which may be left by the presses, and polishes the openers to a bright finish. Completed openers may be stapled on an instruction card or packed in boxes for distribution to stores or beverage companies.”

Opener Closure

One could say that the first hints of Vaughan's eventual demise started appearing way back even before the war, as people were already experiencing a certain familiar annoyance.

Forbes magazine founder B. C. Forbes wrote a syndicated column in 1940 in which he references the "necessity for having either a can opener or bottle opener at hand before various products could be used."

In the same article, the Vaughan Novelty MFG Company's executive vice president, R. C. Harris, offered a statement on the subject: "The point you make about the bottle cap with the tab, which requires no opener, is well taken," he wrote. "There are many angles to consider. One is the cost of the tab. Another is the employment furnished in manufacturing can and bottle openers—over 50,000,000 openers are distributed annually . . . We have constantly worked with can manufacturers and are now supplying one of our regular can openers with a can-punch built into the opener."

Forbes seemed unimpressed. "My contention," he concluded, "is that, if possible, every unit of merchandise should be made ready to be used without the necessity of having to find some contrivance."

Calling Vaughan's primary product a "contrivance" is a bit brutal, but over time, many have shared the opinion, and new technology has borne out society's preference for something quicker and easier than "Quick & Easy."

Perhaps sensing the oncoming tide, John Grace had the name of the company officially changed in 1950 to the Vaughan Manufacturing Co., dropping the "novelty" so as to seem, perhaps, a bit more serious.

The inevitable arrival of the pull tab on soda and beer cans, however, cut deeply into Vaughan's can opener sales from the 1960s onward. Screwtop lids on bottles was a further insult. And new competition from cheaply made imported openers was the predictable death knell.

As late as the 1970s, Vaughan was still calling itself the "World's Largest Manufacturer of Can and Bottle Openers," which may have been more of a slogan than a fact by that point. By then the company had finally left its cozy Carroll Avenue factory and occupied the rundown former home of the Vanderkook & Sons printing press company at 900 North Kilpatrick Avenue.

Vaughan appears to have ceased operations around 1984, but information is frankly scant when it comes to the later years. If you can connect the dots for us on the collapse of this once mighty can opening empire, please let us know.

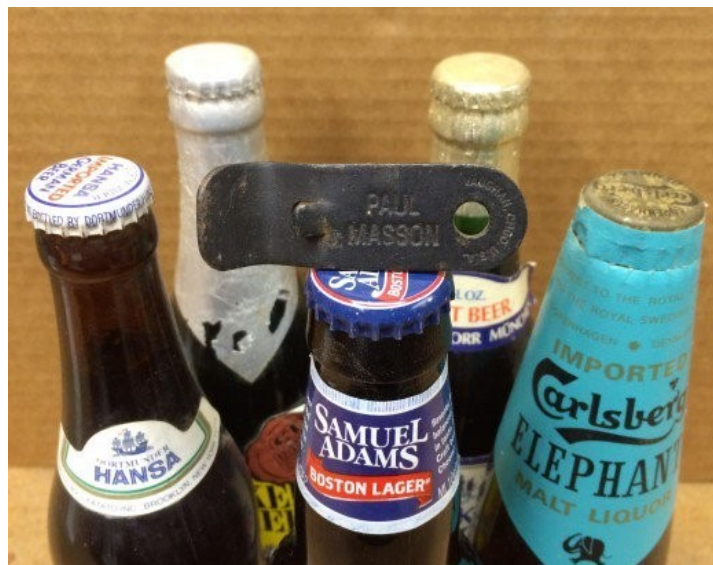

Bottle Opener History: From Cap Lifters to Speed Openers by Anthony Altorena

Nov 08, 2018 · The earliest bottle openers resembled small keys, with the Church Key style opener on one end and a hole on the other so it could be attached to a key chain or hung from a hook on the wall. Cheap and easy to make, many early openers were simple metal tools embossed with advertising for beer, soda pop, restaurants and bars. Anthony enjoys spending time in the workshop, in the kitchen, in the yard and out fishing. He writes from his personal experience.

Just a Cap Opener Away from Refreshment

Pop-top cans and twist-off caps are convenient, but many premium beverages still sport the traditional crimped-on bottle cap. A quick peek into our refrigerator found two brands of soft drinks, a hard lemonade, a pale ale and two lagers -- all in glass bottles with a metal bottle cap pressed firmly in place. No amount of twisting will remove these caps.

So how do we release their refreshing liquid goodness? It's easy to take the ubiquitous bottle opener for granted -- right up to the point when you want to pop the top off of a crimped cap. Most kitchens have several different types of cap lifters stashed away in a drawer, but what if you're camping, hanging at a barbecue, or out fishing?

My Favorite Bottle Opener

My tool of choice has been hanging from a key chain since the mid-1970s. Stamped with the Paul Mason logo, the little bottle opener was an advertising give-away from a liquor salesman that stopped by the family store. From popping beers on the beach at night, through a college party or two, out on fishing trips and into backyard get-togethers, this little opener has removed countless caps over the years. The original chrome finish is long gone, and the metal endured several resprays of paint. As the photo shows, the little opener is overdue for a fresh coat.

The History of Bottle Openers and Cap Lifters

And a few fun facts too

Did You Know?

Before the 1850s, most bottles were sealed with wooden or cork stoppers.

The first screw off cap is introduced in the 1850s.

Around the same time, beer brewers began to use porcelain stoppers held in place with a wire bail to seal their bottles.

William Painter invented the Crown Cork style of bottle cap, and patents his new design in 1892. Very similar to today's bottle cap, Painter's original design crimped a metal cap over the bottle opening.

Two years later, William Painter patents the Church Key cap lifter to remove Crown Corks bottle tops.

In the early 1900s, beverage production increases dramatically and nearly all bottling companies adopt the Crown Cork crimp style bottle cap.

With the increased manufacturing and sales of beverages in crown capped bottles, the need also increased for the specialty tool to remove the cap from the bottles. A plethora of Church Key openers hit the market, many sporting the logos of breweries and soft drinks.

In 1925, the wall mounted bottle cap opener makes it easy to pop off the top using just one hand.

Cap Lifters & Bottle Openers

Since William Painter invented the Crown Cork bottle cap, and then patented the first tool to open this new cap in 1894, tens of millions of bottle openers have been produced. The earliest bottle openers resembled small keys, with the Church Key style opener on one end and a hole on the other so it could be attached to a key chain or hung from a hook on the wall.

Cheap and easy to make, many early openers were simple metal tools embossed with advertising for beer, soda pop, restaurants and bars.

Advertisers saw the potential for publicizing their brand through this inexpensive tool, hoping to have their bottle opener hanging from every key chain and on kitchen wall hook. Beyond the utilitarian tool, openers were shaped like animals, figurines, boots, hats, bottles and countless other shapes, and made from brass, cast-iron and steel. Other openers were made to commemorate special events or as souvenirs for tourist and travelers.

Many of these original bottle openers are as collectible as they are interesting -- though it can be difficult to distinguish a vintage piece from a contemporary copy.

Church Key Bottle Opener

Bottle Opener History: From Cap Lifters to Speed Openers by Anthony Altorena

Church Key Openers

Very similar to the original Church Key designed by William Painter in the 1850s, this little opener was probably made in late 1950s or early 1960s. Embossed with the Piel's Beer logo, this cap remover is easy to use: grasp the bottle firmly in one hand and the opener in the other. Hook the lower jaw of the Church Key into one of the cap tines and with the top centered on the lid of the bottle cap, lift the opener upwards. The cap pops right off.

Church Key Bottle Openers

Church Keys are interesting collectibles, and they are commonly available at yard sales and flea markets for just a dollar or two. Older Church Keys can be quite valuable if you are fortunate enough to find an authentic antique. For the most part, the fun is in the hunt to find an opener sporting the logo of defunct soft drink or brewery such as Piel's Beer.

Simple Pop Top Bottle Opener

Easy to use and inexpensive to manufacture, this style of opener uses the same lever action as the Church Key to lift off a bottle cap. The opening has two little lips for hooking under the edge of the cap (back towards the "V" portion of the opening near the handle) while the metal bar across the front on the opening rests on the bottle cap.

To lift off the cap, hold the bottle firmly in one hand and the opener in the other. Hook the lips of the opener under the edge of the cap and with the front edge of the opening positioned on the bottle cap, lift the handle upwards. The fulcrum action pops off the cap.

The pop top opener pictured here is a contemporary, inexpensive and massed produced item. We have several of these openers hanging in strategic locations around the house and in the garage, in the garden shed and in my tackle and tool boxes -- just in case the need arises to pop open a cold refreshment.

Wall Mounted Openers

The wall mounted bottle opener uses the same lever action as the Church Key cap lifter but with one major advantage: you only need one hand to pop off the cap. The expended cap falls into a cap catcher positioned under the opener, or perhaps down onto the floor.

The old-time soft drink coolers often had this style of cap remover integrated into the cabinet. After purchasing the bottled drink and removing it from the cooler, the bottle top is positioned in the opener. A quick flick of the wrist, and the cap pops off and drops into the cap catcher.

Wall mounted bottle openers are still popular and manufactured today, and vintage wall mounted openers are also quite common and easy to find at garage sales and flea markets.

Antique Cast-Iron Openers

Though this may not look like a bottle opener at first glance, a closer inspection reveals a hooked cap lifter on the lower right side of the lamp post. This unique little opener is made of cast-iron, and it is probably from the 1930s or 40's. The figurine is hand painted, and it is about 4 1/2 inches tall.

Cast-iron bottle openers were made in a variety of designs, and you can find vintage openers in a wide variety of shapes including owls, anchors, mermaids, fish -- even miniature replicas of the Eiffel Tower. Like the little fellow hanging on to the lamp post, many of these cast iron designs cleverly disguised their utilitarian function of popping tops and opening bottles.

Cast Iron Figurine Bottle Opener

Novelty Bottle Openers

Novelty Bottle Openers come in so many shapes and styles, and are made from many different types of materials. This little fish is shaped from turquoise with embedded bits of stone and trimmed in silver. Made in Mexico, it is primarily decorative as its Church Key jaws are too soft and twist under pressure. The little fish opener rests in a kitchen drawer, bringing back pleasant memories of that trip every time I see it.

We bought this interesting fish shaped opened while on vacation in Mexico

But it would be nicer if it worked better.

Multi-Taskers

Ask anyone who owns a Swiss Army pocketknife to name the functions of the multiple blades. Odds are that even if they can't remember all of the different blades or how to use them properly, they will recall the little Church Key style opener.

Adding a bottle opener to a pocketknife, or to a Waiter's Friend (the folding combination corkscrew, knife blade and bottle opener) or a multitude of similar multi-functional pocket tools is a convenient and inexpensive addition to the tool. The number of blades and the jobs that they perform is nearly limitless.

Key Chain Bottle Openers

Small, portable and efficient: three good reasons for carrying a key chain opener on ummm, ... on your key chain.

My little bottle opener is well traveled. From my very first car to the old truck parked outside in the driveway today, this opener outlasted many vehicles and moved between many different key rings. After a little scrubbing and a new coat of paint, it will be ready for several more years of reliable service.

Or maybe I should get it chrome plated.

My Favorite Key Ring Bottle Opener

Speed openers are a bartender's best friend

The Speed Blade Opener: A Bartender's Best Friend

Introduced in the 1950s, speed openers are the bartender's best friend. The flat bar design of the speed opener is large enough for the busy barkeep to grab quickly, and light-weight and easy to manipulate for popping off bottle caps quickly and efficiently.

The wide slot on the speed opener makes it easy to slip the business end of the opener over the top of the bottle, while the round hole on the opposite end can slide down the neck of a frosty bottle to pull it out of the ice bucket.

Vendors looking for marketing opportunities also love the wide, flat speed opener bar that offers lots of space for product logos and catchy slogans.

“Opener and eBay Trivia” (“BIN” Buy-It-Now & “DNMR” Did Not Meet Reserve)

The new eBay Payments System is okay but I had several buyers since I started in September refusing to use a credit card to pay for an item which at this point is required for eBay Payments. Sometime within the next year eBay will supposedly allow PayPal again along with Apple Pay, Google Pay and about any payment option you can think of. I have a feeling eBay will just continue to slowly go downhill.

There were much fewer results to report so I added in results of two local buyers in St. Louis who bought a lot of Art Santen’s openers. Also I sold most of Art’s wood handle corkscrews to a dealer and tracked those results. Anyone wanting to check out what Art has left is welcomed to pay him a visit. It takes time to sell 40,000+ openers.

The local dealers bought his collection of 1980s cast iron wall mounts and I thought they would be hard to sell. Was I ever wrong as they brought more than many of the older cast iron bottle openers. They also scored on Art’s 2-Way opener collection which contained about 2,000 (JFO styles M-29, M-30 & M-83).

Scott Bristoll was the lucky buyer of Art’s wood handle corkscrews. I cut him a pretty good deal as most were worn and hard to read. Once Scott started selling them I got a lecture about how hard it was to remove Art’s JFO identification stickers off of the handles. Art usually had a white price sticker and then put scotch tape over the sticker. After being in a basement for years it was like Art had used super glue. I told Scott if you think they are hard to get off of wood, he needed to work on plastic openers. A lot of time spent cleaning the stickers off. I told Scott that is why I wholesaled the lot to him. I already had a full time job cleaning up his other openers.

One way I cleaned a lot of Art’s openers was by using a tumbling Vibratory Bowl with fine walnut shell grit as the medium. It works great for getting rust off of steel openers. But I did find out when I cleaned a bunch of B-13 Nifty corkscrews the fine grit does get into any openings (where the corkscrew swivels) and is not easy to remove. Ditto on the N-9 Sled openers. The grit gets under the rubber stopper. I was amazed at how the grit just kept coming out. Still the method is really good for removing surface rust while retaining the original finish.

After a minor mishap where the lid came off in the garage and covered Pat’s Expedition with fine dust, I moved the tumbling operation to our Pergola in our back yard. I could do 60-80 openers at once and usually tumbled them for about 12 hours. A mid-range tumbler costs about $150-200 and walnut medium about $25. Just another cleaning method.

The ICCA Auction seemed to have a lot of good results in November so interest is still fairly high for good corkscrews and I can say a lot of my eBay sales are to a local collector or someone who has the same name as is on the opener. Please send any comments and questions to me to report in the next issue.

O-4-UL Centlivre on left sold for $325 and one on the right for $326. A lucky seller had two examples and the Fort Wayne, Ind. collectors convinced me they are very serious about their local collectibles. Before now unknown in any collection but I guess two locals are very happy. A lot of money for an O-4 wall mount.

The Stanleys Will Be Driving to JFO this Year
Pat Will Be Saying Keep the Back Window Clear
I Have to Drive Through the Mountains You Know
And We Will Have a Lot of Openers in Tow
That's All Assuming He Will Leave Room for Me
Cause He Wants to Take Everything for You Guys to See
He's Been Polishing Up the Latest Collection He Bought
Just How Many This Time I Forgot
His Opener Room is Bursting at the Seams
With Openers to Fill Everyone's Dreams
The Collectors Won't Even Notice if the Spouses Sneak Away
We Can Have Our Own Special Shopping Day
We Can Leave the Trading Floor
And Go Wherever We Wish to Explore
Please Be Part of This Great Group of Friends
If You Don't Come, You Will Regret it When the Show Ends
